

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A gas recovery apparatus and method for reclaiming and concentrating volatile organic compounds from the effluent of a semiconductor manufacturing operation is described. Vacuum Swing Adsorption is used to treat effluent containing volatile organic compounds to reversibly capture and subsequently release the volatile organic compounds, followed by recycle and/or cogeneration of the captured volatile organic compounds.